Scope and Content

Siegfried Herbert Nathan Horn was born to Albin and Klara Horn in Werzen, Germany, on March 17, 1908. He was interested in flying, (his father was a famous pilot), civil engineering, and medicine, but his mother influenced him to go to the seminary in Friedensau to become a minister. Following this time, and after a brief study at Stanborough Park, England, he began ministerial duties in Holland in 1930. In 1933 he went as a missionary to the Dutch East Indies serving in various positions there until the outbreak of World War II. He married Jeanne H. Rothfusz while serving as a missionary in the Dutch East Indies. During World War II he was taken by the Dutch and later the British and interned in prison camps in Indonesia and India.

Following the war Horn returned to school this time at Walla Walla College earning a B.A. degree in 1947. Then the next year he earned an M. A. from the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary in Washington, DC. He studied at John Hopkins University with Professor William A. Albright for a short while, then studied at the University of Chicago where he earned a Ph.D. in Egyptology in 1951.

In 1951 Siegfried joined the faculty of the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary where he remained the remainder of his career. While professor of Archaeology and History of Antiquity he published many articles and several books on archaeology and the Bible, and served as the founding editor of the Andrews University Seminary Studies in 1963. Probably his greatest publishing achievement was his large contribution by way of introductory articles and commentary on Genesis, Exodus, Ezra, and Nehemiah in the Seventh-Day Adventist Bible Commentary and the Bible Dictionary.

In the early 1960s he began to participate in the excavation of the Tell Balatah, ancient Shechem. In 1968 he was the first Adventist to direct an archaeological expedition when he and his team worked at Tell Hesban, Jordan. He returned to Hesban as director of the dig in 1971, and 1973. He turned the directorship over to his former student, Lawrence Geraty, for 1974 and 1976 while still serving as senior advisor and project registrar.

In 1970 he founded the Archaeological Museum at Andrews University which was later named after him. After serving at Andrews University for many years, including Dean of the Seminary beginning in 1973, he retired to California in 1976. He continued to teach in overseas extension schools and give lectures and tours until 1992. His lifetime bibliography includes nearly 800 articles and several books in German, Dutch, and English. He donated his vast archaeological library to the Horn Archaeological Museum Library.

His first wife, Jeanne, died in 1970. He married a second Jeanne, Jeanne Kirkwood, who died in 1988. Two years following the death of his second Jeanne he made a miraculous recovery after a serious fall and surgery. He married Elizabeth Leppers in October 1991. He was able to lecture at the 25th anniversary celebration of the Hesban dig combined with his 85th birthday celebration in March, 1993. He passed away on November 28, 1993 in Deer Park, California.

This collection provides a wide ranging view of this remarkable man and his accomplishments. There are many personal items including his extensive diaries. Along with the diaries there are recordings Horn made where he narrates his life. The cassette tapes have been updated to new media for preservation purposes. This collection also contains a good number of letters from 1929 to 1976, and 1993. There are some documents of Horn's and of his three wives, some personal artifacts, a significant collection of photograph albums, his traveling reports, and awards and appreciations. Another interesting series is his personal collection of maps. In the last part, there are some writings of Siegfried Horn, and materials for the book, Survivor: A Biography of Siegfried Horn, written by Joyce Rochat.

Arrangement

Siegfried Horn was a very meticulous recorder of details and a stickler for documentation. This is reflected to a great degree in this collection. Nearly everything was carefully labeled often with great detail including, for example, the listing of everyone shown in a group photograph. The collection was, therefore, fairly well arranged within general categories or series when it was received at the Center for Adventist Research. However it was not possible to tell the relationship of the series to each other. Therefore, the sequence of the series in this collections organization is artificial. The arrangement of the series are as follows:

- Donation
- Personal
- Awards and Appreciations
- Maps
- Writings
- Items Removed

Within each section the folders are arranged by person and then in a somewhat chronological arrangement. The letters and diaries are chronological, and the writings are chronological as well. If there are no dates in one section, the arrangement is alphabetical.

The items removed are either discarded or made a part of the Centers other collections.

Provenance

The Center for Adventist Research received portions of this collection from various sources at different times. The first part came from Siegfried Horn himself in May, 1976, upon his retirement and moving to California. The second group came from his surviving wife, Elizabeth Horn in 1994-1995 via the Horn Archaeological Library. The Center did not receive this group until some years later when the Horn Library passed on what they did not want for their collection. The third group came from Joyce Rochat in 1994 who had a goodly amount of Horn's diary and narrative materials for use in writing her book, Survivor.

Use

All users of this collection are required to complete the “Application to Use Unpublished Records,” and to observe the regulation specified in the “Patron Agreement” and “Researcher’s Code of Conduct.” Most records in this collection are open and available for research. However, certain portions of his diaries may be restricted and may not be copied or otherwise reproduced or published. Citation for this collection:
