Week of Prayer Readings Collection 299

Scope and Content

Each year the Seventh-day Adventist church develops a series of readings designed to be read by the whole church during a designated week of prayer usually during the fall months in the northern hemisphere. The articles are typically written by notable figures within the leadership levels of the church such as A. T. Jones, A. G. Daniells, W. A. Spicer, J. L. McElhany, and W. H. Branson. The General Conference president usually wrote the lead article. The articles typically appeared in the general church magazine, the Review and Herald.

This collection consists of a series of week of prayer readings from 1886 to 1975, in English, with a sprinkling of readings in non-English languages.

Arrangement

The materials originally were contained in a series of twenty-five binders. While the original binders have been discarded, each folder in the collection corresponds with an original binder. The week of prayer readings are divided in English and Non-English Languages. The sermons are dated chronologically in the English material from 1886 through the 1975. The non-English materials follow a languages order and then by date within that language.

Provenance

This collection was compiled by the James White Library and Center for Adventist Research through the years.
