College Celebrates Golden Jubilee

Welcome, Students

THEO WILLIAMS, Dean of Boys

As I visit from room to room in the men's dormitory, I see faces from all parts of the Western Hemisphere. Here are men who have a vision of the future and who have found a way to make that vision a reality by coming to participate in the class-work program at Madison College. It is a grand feeling these new fellows have as they come here with their determination and grit to complete a tough job.

Yet, some will drop by the way-side as others have before. They will not drop out because of some lack of intellect, but as a consequence of losing sight of their goal and closing their minds to the vision they came here with.

The Lord, from the beginning of time, has permitted youth to dream great and wonderful dreams, but worldly enticements have many times dimmed these dreams.

There is not a moment of the day that you will not be tempted to lower your standards, to "open the gate," but, as the older students and the graduates who have reached their goals will testify, while your eye is off the goal, you will not have a minute's rest—not until you have obtained your goal.

To you, then, the men and leaders of the Advent Movement of tomorrow, I wish to congratulate you on your choice of the right road and to welcome you to a big, happy family.

ILKA M. REIS, Dean of Girls

The new school year has arrived. Everyone is busy registering and getting settled for the year of work, study, and fellowship that our Christian college is offering.

Most of you have already made up your minds about your courses. You are ready to march straight ahead toward your goal. A few of you are taking up your work with some trepidation, fear, and perhaps a few questions still in your minds.

Some among us have never known a real home, a Christian

SOME OF THE FOUNDERS OF MADISON COLLEGE

Seated: W. C. White, Mrs. E. G. White, Mrs. Edson White, Edson White. Standing: Clarence Crisler, P. T. Magan, Miss Minnie Hawkins, Mrs. N. H. Druillard, E. A. Sutherland, Sara McEnterfer.

Madison College is celebrating her fiftieth anniversary this year. The celebration will culminate on October 7 in a day-long program featured by stories of the founding of the institution—its progress through the years, its accomplishments, and a vista of what the future holds in store.

In the spring of 1904, President E. A. Sutherland and Dean Percy T. Magan, of Emmanuel Missionary College, having been stirred by appeals which had for a number of years been coming from the South, decided to break away from their responsibilities in the North to see what could be done about helping the people in the underprivileged areas of the Southland.

In Nashville, Tennessee, they met with Mrs. White and her son, W. C. White, and a number of others for a trip up the Cumberland River on the steamboat Morning Star. A slight breakdown in the boat's machinery resulted in a tie-up for repairs at the Edgefield Junction Landing. While waiting for the repairs to be made, they wandered around the adjoining land with Mrs. White. She was impressed that this was the place for President Sutherland and Dean Magan to start their work. The outlook, from their viewpoint, was anything but promising; but with encouragement from Mrs. White the men purchased the land. Thus began the institution now known as Madison College and Madison Sanitarium-Hospital.

The early years, and for that matter all the years, were years of sacrifice, hard work, prayer, and great faith. From 1904 on for the remainder of the lifetime of Mrs. White, the institution was aided by her encouragement and help and the help of friends who became interested in the type of a school that provided an opportunity to "earn while learning."

Madison College has had a glorious history. From her campus have gone hundreds to take up the Lord's work in varying capacities. We find her graduates and trained young people in the foreign lands as missionary teachers, doctors, nurses, and other types of workers. We find them in many smaller units for which Madison set the pattern—a program where laymen could do self-supporting missionary - educational - medical work in the Southland, elsewhere in the United States, and even in foreign lands.

Yes, Madison College has made a wonderful record—a grand contribution to the Seventh-day Adventist cause—and occupies a

Self-Supporters to Hold Convention October 4-7

Madison College will be host to the Association of Self-Supporting Institutions at its annual meeting from October 4-7. Preparations are well on the way for entertaining delegates from 146 member institutions, many of which will send several delegates.

This association, a department of the General Conference, is the successor of the Commission on Rural Living, which was established in 1946. The president of the association is L. A. Senseman, M.D., and its secretary is Wesley Amundsen, former president of Madison College and also the editor of the association's official organ, News of Self-Supporting Institutions and Rural Living.

The Editor's Pen

It's school time again and here on the Madison College campus we are bidding "Good-bye" to some of the old students and a hearty "Welcome" to the new ones who are joining our ranks. It looks as if we are going to have a record enrollment for the school year 1954-55. Poor Miss Reis feels like the old woman in the shoe who had so many children she didn't know what to do, for that's just the trouble she is having in Williams Hall. She has so many girls she can't find places to put them all! But we'll find room somewhere! I haven't heard how the fellows are making out down at the Men's Court and the Assembly Hall but from the number of new students I see around I'm sure they will at least have a full house (if they don't already!).

And so, old students (including "yours truly"), here is our opportunity to exercise our "School Spirit" and really show the new students the true spirit of Madison College. Let's give them a cordial welcome and make them feel at home—as if they belong here and are one of us.

Here may I extend to all the new students—you who are already here and you who are coming—a warm greeting and a wish that you will like it here and be happy. No matter where you go there will be ups and downs, joys and sorrows; so don't give up too easily. Discouragement is one of Satan's most important tools.

We are looking forward to a good school year—better than any school year before, and may we keep making them better in the years to come. jac

Delta Nu Zeta

This is our biggest year of enrollment in Williams Hall. We are already full, and many more girls are expected. Some of our rooms have three in them while the larger rooms have four. Because of the overflow some of our beloved senior nurses are moving to Gotzian Home. We really are going to miss them.

Lights have gone out at Williams Hall. These halls, which have become accustomed to much rush and noise during the past few weeks, are at peace now. In the dim light we see they are lined with trunks, furniture, boxes, and wrapping paper. It seems as if all the noise has suddenly been swallowed up by the night. Only here and there we hear some whispering. Doris Culberson, one of our "ity-bity" girls, tells Glenda Luzader that she loves Madison, though she is still homesick. We hear echoes of this from other rooms where new girls abide. Then, too, we hear whispers of two or three pals who have to tell one another how happy they are to be back.

Just before vacation the Delta Nu Zeta club chose its new officers. They are Lillian Azevedo, president; Pat Gaulding, vice-president; Muriel Durham, treasurer; Elizabeth Kurlak, secretary; Ruby Alder, religious leader; Hilda Schneider, parliamentarian. Miss Reis, our dean, served refreshments after the election.

Agnes and Steve Dorosh are having a happy honeymoon in Canada. They will soon be back to join the Madison family. Just after the wedding and just as they were leaving for their honeymoon, a long distance call from California came for Agnes and Steve. Agnes's parents called her, sending their best wishes. By the way, Mr. Shigley, who gave the bride away at the wedding, is like a second father to Agnes. Long years ago in China, when Agnes was a tiny girl, the Shigleys had Agnes in their home much of the time. Both families were missionary families.

How alert are you? Have you noticed that Helen Pearson is practicing the Spanish language?

Ruby Alder is back in the dorm? JoAnn Gibbons and Mary McComas have something in common (watches)?

Wanda Thomas is a hard individual to find?

Wenonah Ramsey gave the parlor a new look?

I have just one more word to say, and this is especially for the new students: "Don't dodge difficulties—meet them, greet them, beat them." To do this, just remember—"When it's hardest to pray, pray hardest."

Senior Nurses Honored at Social

VELMA F. MIDGHALL

Thursday, August 26—a date never to be forgotten in the history of the nursing class of '54!

The months of anticipation, anxiety, and dread, hitherto experienced during the weeks of study and review, were now melted away to memory under the sedative sensation of relaxation and relief from nervous tension. This day marked the completion of the last State Board examination. Of course this experience has its heart-warming memories, also, when we recall how in the morning preceding the examination, the Senior Class, together with the director of nurses, Mrs. Doris Clapp, and their class president, John Aldrich, met in the college chapel for prayer to ask wisdom and guidance of God, and then drove by "car convoy," so to speak, to Nashville for the testing feat.

Our faculty and friends had our interests at heart, too, and prayed for us during our absence.

We were pleasantly surprised to find these friends awaiting our return at a lawn social planned by Elder and Mrs. Norman Clapp, our chaplain and his wife. Among those present were President and Mrs. A. A. Jaspersen; Dean and Mrs. William Sandborn; the senior class sponsor, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Bowen; the college senior class sponsors, Dr. and Mrs. Ira Gish; and other beloved teachers.

More surprises were in store when class gifts were presented to Mrs. Clapp and to Mr. and Mrs. Bowen expressing in a small way the esteem and grateful appreciation of the senior nurses for their guidance and counsel.

Perhaps even more surprised were Agnes Effenberg, our classmate, and her fiancé, Steve Dorosh, who were presented with a wedding gift from the class. (They were married 3 days later!)

The evening passed all too quickly under the influence of pleasant chatting, lawn croquet, and viewing beautiful colored slides of scenic California.

Plentiful and delicious light refreshments were served by Miss Stewart, Miss Rimmer, and Mrs. Self.

What a perfect "finis" for State Board Examinations! We hope it will become an institutional tradition, and the charter members—the Seniors of '54!

- Lewis and Geraldine Dickman are back on the campus for the winter. Lewis will continue his college course after an absence of two years in the armed services. Mrs. Dickman will be remembered as Geraldine Hamilton, a graduate of Madison College School of Nursing.
- Mrs. W. S. Wilson and daughter Patsy spent a few days vacationing in the Smoky Mountains and in Charleston, South Carolina.

Wedding Bells

The wedding of Miss Agnes Effenberg and Mr. Steve Dorosh took place Sunday afternoon, August 29, at 4:00 p.m. on the lawn at the home of Elder and Mrs. J. N. Clapp. Elder R. E. Stewart officiated at the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Jeanette Vernon, maid of honor, and Miss Mary McComas, bridesmaid. The groom's best man was Mr. Gerald Turnbull and he was also attended by Mr. Thomas Linville. Wedding music was furnished by Mrs. Betty Kerbs at the piano. Miss JoAnn Gibbons' solo, "Oh Promise Me," was followed by a cornet solo, Schubert's "Serenade" by Patricia Silver. A ladies' quartet composed of JoAnn Gibbons, Violet Stewart, Connie Rimmer, and Patricia Silver sang "Because." "The Lord's Prayer" was sung by Mr. Gilbert Jorgensen. Don MacIntosh, Eldon Vickers, and Ruben Perales served as ushers. The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Philip Shigley, who was a friend of the Effenberg family in China. Mrs. Gene Hudson was in charge of the reception which followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Dorosh recently graduated from nurse's training with the class of 1954 and Mr. Dorosh is a freshman nurse. After a short honeymoon trip to the groom's home the couple will live on the campus. Mrs. Dorosh will work in the sanitarium and Mr. Dorosh will continue with his nurse's training.

New Teachers Join College Staff

Madison College welcomes two new teachers and their families to the community.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stearns and children—Kathryn, Thomas, and Stephen—come from Escondido, California, where Mr. Stearns has been teaching agriculture at San Pasqual Academy for the past three years. He will teach agriculture at Madison College and have charge of the poultry department. Mr. Stearns is a graduate of La Sierra College, where for the past twenty-five years his father, G. E. Stearns, has been farm manager. Mrs. Stearns is a business college graduate and will be secretary to the dean, Dr. W. C. Sandborn.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Collins and small son Donald have recently moved to the campus from Jackson, Mississippi, where Mr. Collins taught last year. Mr. Collins is the new college librarian. A graduate of Southern Missionary College, he received his master's degree from the University of Mississippi and this last summer attended library school at Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia. Mrs. Collins is the daughter of Elder A. O. Dart, formerly of the Southern Union and now of the General Conference.

Glimpses of the Past

There's a story in the background of hundreds of spots on the 800 acres that comprise the campus of Madison College.

A third generation of young people are now peopling the campus, working in the industries, sitting in the classrooms, since the days when a group of consecrated pioneers came South to carry out the instruction given them to found the Madison school. And many of this new generation are not acquainted with the human interest stories of sacrifice and devotion connected with the days of yesteryear. It is therefore the purpose of a series of stories for the MADISONIAN to present a few highlights from these earlier days.

Mrs. Nellie Druillard

Since Mrs. Nellie Druillard, or Aunt Nellie, or Mother D, as she was affectionately called, is so connected with many of the mileposts in the development of the work that her name will frequently be mentioned in forthcoming articles, this first sketch presents a few highlights in her life of tireless labor in the cause of God.

In 1844, that memorable year in Advent history, Nellie Rankin was born on a farm in Wisconsin. The family were among pioneer Seventh-day Adventists. As a girl she attended district school and later graduated from a State normal, afterward teaching in the rural schools of several states for many years. She then became county superintendent of schools in several counties in Nebraska. Then she became superintendent of all the schools in the city of Boulder, Colorado. Even during these years she was known as a woman of unusual skill in business lines. She rose steadily in the educational work and was highly esteemed by her colleagues.

However, her desire to be connected with the cause of God led her in 1886 to resign her position and join the Nebraska Conference as Tract Society secretary. For a period of time she was also one of Sister White's secretaries in California.

In the early 1890's she married

Mr. Alma Druillard and together the couple went to Africa as missionaries. Mrs. Druillard became secretary-treasurer of the South African Conference, with headquarters at Cape Town. Mr. Druillard helped in the establishment of the Rhodesian Mission, and his outstanding work in South Africa was the securing of the 12,000 acres of land from Cecil Rhodes for the Malamulo Mission, which has become one of the strong bases for our educational work in South Africa.

While in Africa Mrs. Druillard developed a deep burden for the colored people, longing to establish an institution for training colored nurses.

Upon returning from Africa the Druillards connected with the group who had left Battle Creek to found Emmanuel Missionary College at Berrien Springs. Here Mr. Druillard died in 1903. It was at this time that Sister White told Mrs. Druillard, then 64 years of age, that she should join Brethren Sutherland and Magan in the establishment of the work at Madison.

"Why, I'm too old to begin a new work! I'm retiring," Mrs. Druillard objected.

"Nell, you retiring?" Sister White remonstrated. "Do you know that if you take hold to help these men, the Lord will rejuvenate you?"

This promise was truly fulfilled, for she lived thirty years longer and became a blessing not only to Madison but also to other enterprises.

Years before this, the Druillards had purchased land in Wyoming for a ranch, in the region of the Teapot Dome development. Now, after Mr. Druillard's death oil was discovered. Mrs. Druillard sold the land and realized a vast sum of money, which enabled her to assist Madison many times in its development and finally to establish Riverside Sanitarium.

Here at Madison she was business manager of the school and superintendent of the sanitarium for many years. In fact it has been said that "at some time in the history of the school she filled every chair on the faculty, headed every activity, and directed every group of workers."

When she was eighty years old, Dr. Sutherland, who was her nephew, took her to General Conference at San Francisco. One rainy evening as she and friends were crossing a street she walked in front of an on-coming car, breaking one leg, her right arm, and a number of ribs, fracturing her nose, and receiving many lacerations. Although no one expected her to recover, in a few months she was able to be brought back to Madison, where she rested for eighteen months more. This long rest made her a new woman.

"I told the Lord that if He wanted me to live, I would carry out what I said I would some day

Seniors Receive Degrees August 21

Sixty-four degrees, diplomas, and certificates were conferred upon graduates from seven different courses at the annual commencement at Madison College held on August 21. President A. A. Jasperson, assisted by Dean William Sandborn and Registrar Lillian Patrick, presented the diplomas after the commencement address given by Dr. Hugh C. Stuntz, president of Scarritt College for Christian Workers, Nashville.

Other speakers for the week end of graduation were Dr. Gideon Hagstotz, alumni secretary, C.M.E., who gave the baccalaureate address, and Elder Robert H. Pierson, president of the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference, speaker at the Friday evening consecration service.

Following is a list of the graduates:

Bachelor of Science degrees: Edgar Byrd, Cleo Boyer, Josephine Boyer, Ellen Crowder, Olive Cruickshank, Ray Karnatz, Hideo Hamano, Ali Riza Kavlak, Rikiji Kawase, Velma Midghall, Esther Radinz, Robert Santini, Myrle Tabler, Jesús Vega, Theo Williams.

Two-year Elementary Teacher Training: Mable Nielsen.

Attendant Nursing: Jane Brooks, Josephine Clark, Edith Hicks, Julia Lee, Violet Ritchie, Clara Mae Williams, Elizabeth Williams.

Convention

The purpose of the organization is to strengthen the self-supporting program, working in close association with the local union conferences, and to help the laity to unite with the ministry in the proclaiming of the last gospel message.

The opening session of the convention will be held Monday night, October 4. October 5 and 6 will be occupied with all-day sessions. On Tuesday night, October 5, the Madison Alumni Association will hold a business meeting in the cafeteria, and on Wednesday evening, in the same place the Southern Chapter of the C.M.E. Alumni Association will meet.

Climaxing the meeting of the association will be the College's Jubilee Celebration on October 7, which will be a full day consisting of a tour of the campus, speeches by Nashville men, music, and a pageant in the evening.

Welcome Students

home. We trust that Williams Hall will be a haven to you, a friendly place where Christian principles are demonstrated day by day.

Many of you have been carrying heavy responsibilities in your homes since early days of life. You have also been leaders in your little churches at home. We sincerely welcome you, for you will be our leaders here at Madison College.

Those who have come from far away may feel lonesome and blue during these first days, but we advise you to keep looking up and realize what a privilege it is to belong to this school family.

We have a full year before us, full of activities of various kinds. Most important of all are the religious activities—the evening worship, where we meet to read God's word and meditate, the Friday evening vespers, Sabbath school and church, M.V. programs and missionary bands.

Then there are the social hours with games, hikes, bonfires, hayrides, selected motion pictures, and other happy times.

Dormitory life will not be dull or monotonous. Every day will be different and interesting. Of course there are rules to follow. These are not to restrict us, but to make our dormitory life secure and free from worries.

I want to welcome all of you to our friendly home. I also want to be at your service as much as I can. I shall try to be understanding, unselfish, tolerant, and loving as a dear mother.

Let's walk together through the new adjustments we must make at this time. God is with us and will be with us all the year. Let's cooperate to uphold Christian principles. Remember, the standards of this college depend upon YOU.

● Elder and Mrs. Gordon G. Creighton and son Dann, of Lawrence, Michigan, were campus visitors recently. They are both graduates of the Class of 1944, Madison College School of Nursing. After leaving here, the Creightons went to Emmanuel Missionary College, where Elder Creighton completed his ministerial training.

● Among the graduates of Peabody College at the August commencement on August 23 were William H. Wilson, principal of the academy, and David E. Patterson, who received their M.A. degrees.

do. I would establish a sanitarium for colored people."

Her friends tried to talk her out of the notion, but talk was of no avail.

"I promised the Lord when I was in Africa that I would start some kind of work for training colored nurses," she insisted.

And so she established Riverside Sanitarium. From the start her plans to establish a school where colored girls could be trained as practical nurses met the approval of the business men of Nashville, both white and colored. Through her work at Madison, she had become known in Nashville as a business woman of rare ability. She had also endeared herself to Dr. Turner, then head of the Meharry Medical School, which is associated with Fisk University—both colored institutions. Dr. Turner loved Mother D and did all he could to help her establish her sanitarium.

She gave liberally of her means to establish this new work, investing in all about $70,000.

Before her death in 1938 she had developed Riverside to the point where the General Conference was attracted to the work, and she was impressed that she should donate the property to the General Conference. This institution has become so well equipped that it now takes its place beside any first class hospital.

Before she died, she moved back to the Madison campus, built the house now occupied by Mrs. Conser, and spent her last days living with Brother and Sister Conser. The Consers and she had worked together in the establishing of Riverside.

Mother D was ever ready to advise, reprove when necessary, encourage, and urge students and fellow-workers on to more faith and trust in God. Her influence lives on at Madison as every year hundreds of young people receive training in the institution which bears the imprint of her devoted life.

Commencement Sidelights

• Two receive degrees from wheel chairs

As the strains of the "Triumphal March" from Aida ushered in the graduating class on Saturday night, August 21, from the west entrance came nurses wheeling two wheel chairs, in which were seated, in caps and gowns, Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Boyer, members of the college class of '54.

"It has never happened in the history of Madison College and likely never will again," commented Dean Sandborn as he presented the classes to President Jaspersen, prior to the giving of the diplomas. The President stepped from the platform as he presented Bachelor of Science degrees to the Boyers.

Mr. Boyer is still a wheel-chair invalid because of a serious accident several months ago in which both his legs were broken. Less

• It's a small world

Those who were at the commencement exercises remember the tribute which the speaker, Dr. Hugh Stuntz, paid to the Seventh-day Adventist hospital at Chulumani, Bolivia. Dr. Stuntz told of the hazardous trip he once made with a pneumonia-stricken young man from his mission school at La Paz as he took him down to the hospital in lower altitudes. He told of the expert care the young man received and of the influence of the hospital in the community.

After commencement was over, Dr. Naomi Pitman went up to the speaker and told him that she and her husband, Dr. Theron Pitman, were stationed at the Chulumani Hospital at the time of the incident.

Stork News

John Clayton Read arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Read, Loveland, Colorado, in July. Mrs. Read is the former Aquila Patterson. The Reads were both college students in 1953. They are at Shenandoah Valley Academy, New Market, Virginia, this year.

• Dr. Raymond Moore, president of the Japan Missionary College, was a campus visitor recently. He told of plans for expansion at the college, which include a sanitarium-hospital program that will eventually have a capacity of one hundred beds.
