Shopping Center Features Choir

The college choir recently was invited to sing a group of Christmas carols at the official opening of the new Madison Square Shopping Center, which took place at the Square on Thursday evening, November 29.

The choir opened its part of the program with "Deck the Hall," followed by "We Three Kings," in which Charley Culbertson, Stewart Crook, and Harry Mayden represented the three kings.

Other numbers were "Joy to the World," "Angels We Have Heard on High," "O Come All Ye Faithful," and "Silent Night."

Mrs. J. M. Ackerman sang "O Holy Night" with a choral background, and "Away in a Manger," duet by Professor Cossentine and Mrs. Ackerman, had a choral accompaniment.

The program was broadcast over the radio and also enjoyed by a large group of spectators at the Square.

The choir received a generous donation, which was added to the robe fund.

Choir to Present Nativity Story

A Christmas candlelight vesper service will be presented by the Madison College Music Department on Friday evening, December 14, announces Professor F. R. Cossentine. A feature of the program will be "The Song of Christmas," an arrangement of the story of the nativity, as told by Christmas songs, carols, and appropriate Scripture to be given by the college choir.

The program will also include selections by the academy choir, directed by Stewart Crook, and instrumental numbers. Several other items of special interest are being planned.

Distributing 20 food boxes to needy families near the college during Thanksgiving week was the latest project of the Missionary Volunteer society under the leadership of Jack Gibbons and Clinton Johnson, and Mrs. James D. Simmons, sponsor.

"We found real needs in the homes," said one of the M.V.'s who helped distribute the boxes.

The baskets were filled in cooperation with the church members, Dorcas Society leader, and the Associated Students of Madison College.

OTHER ACTIVITIES PROMOTED

This is only one of the many activities which the society is sponsoring this year. The officers not only plan high quality meetings for each Sabbath afternoon one hour before sunset, closing the Sabbath with a vesper meditation, but have outlined various activities for student participation. Out of the welfare fund, money was voted to help defray the expenses of two tonsillectomies recently performed by Dr. Ramsey. Bible studies are being held in the homes where these children live.

The literature and correspondence band, headed by Mrs. Jack Gibbons, is keeping in touch with boys who have left the college and are now serving their country. Soldier kits have been voted for every boy who leaves at the call of duty.

Everett Saulsbury, in charge of the Share Your Faith band, reports that between 50 and 100 people weekly hear the Word of God presented in Bible studies brought to them by students.

Anyone interested in becoming a Master Guide should contact Miss Dorothy Matthews, who leads the Progressive Class Program. A requirement not hard to fill is the reading of the Book Club books, formerly known as the Reading Course. Two sets of these are in the college library, and the society has purchased a 1957 set, which will be in circulation at all times under Miss Matthews' direction.

VISIT TO VETERANS' HOSPITAL

The latest venture of the Sunshine Band was a visit to the Veterans' Hospital. Thirteen students presented a program of sacred music to the soldier boys at

ATS Sponsors Temperance Week

Dr. Winton H. Beaven, formerly connected with the American Temperance Society, climaxed Annual Temperance Week at the college with an address on Friday night, November 16. His talk revealed the wide influence which the American Temperance Society and the magazine Listen have had both in this country and in others.

Dr. Beaven has recently given up his position as director of the Institute of Scientific Studies for the Prevention of Alcoholism to teach speech full time at the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary in Washington, D.C. At one time Dr. Beaven taught history at Madison College.

Temperance Week, sponsored by the Madison College Chapter of the American Temperance Society, began Monday at chapel, when Elder Roland Hegstad, from the editorial staff of These Times, emphasized the effects of liquor and tobacco advertising.

Ross Clark, in a stirring temperance oration, asked, "How long, O America," as he showed what a man will do under the influence of alcohol. Then followed a film, depicting the horrors of drug addiction.

Jan Rushing, president of the society at the college, announces that soon a jingle, poster, and essay contest will be conducted, details of which will be given in the near future.

Alumni Honor Mrs. Bertram

Mrs. Kathryn Bertram, art teacher at Madison for many years, was honored at a program on Monday night for her thirty-five years of service, by a pantomime depicting her life from cradle to retirement.

Alumni, friends, and faculty joined in portraying different phases of Mrs. Bertram's life with speeches, poems, and songs dedicated to her.

A pot luck supper preceded the program.

At the close of the evening Mrs. Bertram was presented with a certificate, which entitled her to pick out any piece of furniture she might wish. It is understood that she is interested in a certain type of chair.

"As a Little Child"

A touching little story recently came to our attention. Little Judy Socol had just turned seven. For her birthday she received a beautiful doll. In fact, it was the nicest doll she had ever owned.

A few days later she went shopping with her mother. On a corner sat a blind woman and her ragged little girl, selling newspapers. Judy was much impressed at the sight. After a few moments' silence, she said, "Mother, I want to give my new doll to that poor little girl."

This was not just a passing thought with Judy, for the next morning she carefully placed all the dolls' clothes in their box and laid her precious doll on top. Then, going to her mother, she begged to be taken back to the city so that she could give her doll to the little beggar girl.

Soon they were on their way. Judy could scarcely wait to find the little girl. Sure enough, there they were, on the same corner. Judy rushed up and began showing the girl the dresses, one by one, waiting as the child described each one to her blind mother. Then she placed her lovely doll in the little girl's arms.

Never once has Judy said one word indicating that she regrets giving away her doll. Nor has she wondered whether she would get another to take its place. Truly a little child has demonstrated to us that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Two by Two

Showers were predicted for Thursday evening, November 15. The kind we had in mind were pink and blue, but the weatherman must have heard the plans, too, for it literally poured down. But the rain didn't dampen the spirits of the girls who gathered at Mrs. Shirley Mino's home to honor Hazel Fisher nor those who gathered at Peggy Jones' new home to honor Mrs. Bill Graves.

And speaking of blue, did you see that "navy" blue suit on the campus? We were glad to see Hazel and Verlin Gill for a few days last week. They are now residing in San Diego, California, where Seaman First Class V. C. Gill is stationed at the naval base.

"Note the contents carefully and don't let it leak out," warned the three-cornered invitation that was sent out to friends of Crystal Morgan and Margie Reynolds. They were honored at a blue and pink shower at the home of Mrs. Thorgeson and Mrs. Weir on Saturday evening, November 17.

The married men are really keeping check on their bill folds this month. Since the shopping center has been opened at Madison Square, big city shopping has been brought right to our door. The girls just can't resist it.

Delta Nu Zeta...

We honored our dean, Mrs. Socol, at a surprise birthday party on Tuesday evening, November 20.

After twenty minutes of anxious waiting in the parlor, we began singing "Happy Birthday" as the Socols came up the stairway to their apartment. Mrs. Socol was led to the seat of honor in the parlor and the rest of the family invited in (including Sammy the dog).

JoAnn Gibbons, who acted as Mistress of Ceremonies, sang a solo, "Friend o' Mine." Janyce Jansen, Petra Sukau, and Lois May Sharpe paid tribute to our dean by telling her how helpful she had been to all of us when we were ill or discouraged and what a wonderful Christian example she had been to us.

After the gifts were opened and passed around, we all ate ice cream and cake together.

The interior of Williams Hall has taken on a new appearance as a result of a series of painting, repairing, and renovating jobs.

The parlor has the newest look, with its freshly painted walls, harmonizing drapes and venetian blinds, new chairs, and newly upholstered furniture.

The showers in the bathrooms have been painted and eight new beveled mirrors have been placed. Also a full-length mirror has been placed in the hall.

Not least of the improvements is a big new fuse box in the hall and the rewiring that has taken care of the electrical overload which was leaving the building in darkness from time to time.

Wasiota Whispers

We extend a hearty welcome to two new students—Charles and Richard Bachelor, who hail from Norfolk, Virginia. They will enroll for school work at the beginning of the winter quarter.

Ben Manzano and his wife, the former Carol Keaton, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Manzano, and other friends at the college. The Manzanos, now at Lodi, California, are both former students of Madison.

Bob Salmon has been on the sick list. It seems as though he had a leaky muffler on his way home from Texas during vacation and suffered the effects of the gas.

With Dean Wike's teeth wired, he's got a lot of bark, but no bite. We hope you will soon be as good as new, Dean.

The biggest whisper in Wasiota is that Harry Bowden has received early Christmas greetings from Uncle Sam. Now Harry's worrying for fear he'll have to leave Madison. He likes Madison—says he wouldn't go to any other school unless it's one that Uncle Sam sends him to. Hope you can stay with us, Harry.

Yours Truly hurt his leg in the game on Thanksgiving, but is doing fine now, in more ways than one.

Thank You...

To those of us who didn't have the privilege of going home over the Thanksgiving holidays things didn't look too cheerful until we awoke on Thanksgiving day to find it snowing. The first snow of the year always has a special meaning—sorta makes you feel all warm inside even though it is cold outside.

This was the setting as we went down to the cafeteria for our Thanksgiving dinner. Mrs. Wilson must have known the empty feeling we would be having not to be around our family table with our loved ones, for she took special pains to have the cafeteria decorated and the tables set with the best silver and little cups of candy.

I'm sure the delicious meal we enjoyed was not prepared in a minute. It must have taken much planning and extra time on the part of Mrs. Wilson. We want to take this opportunity to thank her and all of her co-workers for the wonderful Thanksgiving dinner.

Office Is Remodeled

Elder J. M. Ackerman, personnel director and newly elected acting registrar, has turned carpenter, and with Mr. Drebert's aid has nearly completed the remodeling of the registrar's office.

Already a large set of shelves for the bookstore has been installed. The registrar's office, which in the past has been one large room, is being divided, to make possible a separate counseling room for the registrar.

When Mr. Collins, former registrar, left for the mission field, the Educational Division Committee and the Executive Committee asked Elder Ackerman to become acting registrar, with Mrs. Mitzelfelt assisting in the morning and Mrs. Thornton in the afternoon.

The same committees appointed Mr. William Wilson to the office of acting librarian, which position Mr. Collins also held.

their Sunday evening worship hour. Then the M.V.'s visited five wards and sang to those unable to attend the meeting. Chaplain Humphries was most gracious and invited the group to return.

M. V. COUNCIL

Those directing in the work of the society compose the M.V. Council. In addition to leaders Jack Gibbons, Clinton Johnson, and Evelyn Marshall, academy associate, are Shirley Burk and Rebecca Vaughan, secretaries. Other members of the Council are the pastor, Elder O. J. Mills; Mr. Barney, junior superintendent in the church school; Miss Ruby Sykes, in charge of the ushers; Mrs. Socol, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mayden, Carol Hilgers, Martha Ann Norris, Clyde Holland, and Stewart Crook, the music committee; and Everett Saulsbury, Miss Matthews, and Mrs. Jack Gibbons, band leaders.

Council members meet regularly once a month to discuss better ways of making the society meetings a success as well as voting expenditures and planning for youth activities.

At the last meeting Elder Ted-dric Mohr, Kentucky-Tennessee Conference M.V. secretary, was present to counsel the group. Also present were Elder Salhany, assistant M.V. secretary, and Mrs. Ford, M.V. office secretary.

Mrs. James D. Simmons, chosen by the administration to be faculty sponsor of the society, has had years of experience in young people's work. Prior to her marriage she served for nine years as M.V. secretary of two conferences in the Southern Union.

Clubs Hold Socials

FUTURE HAMS GO ON AIR

K4BFI Ham Radio Shack was the scene of the party of the newly organized Madison College Amateur Club, where the members went on the air at their first gathering on Saturday night, November 17.

Each member had the thrilling experience of sending his voice instantaneously through the air to the contact, which happened to be another Tennessee station.

Professor Morris, the sponsor of the club, says the college has a 65-watt transmitter which is ready to go on the air as soon as someone receives an operating license. Every day some club member can be seen (or heard) in the physics room pounding on the key with a determination to master the Morse code. Before spring every member hopes to have within his possession an amateur radio license.

Then, according to one member, without doubt the college's newest club will be ready to beam a contact with Russia, France, India, or any other part of the globe.

ATTORNEY SARAF SPEAKS

A talk by Mr. G. J. Saraf, an attorney from India who is studying International Law at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, was the main event of the first formal party of the Teachers of Tomorrow Club on Saturday night, November 17, in the pre-school building.

Mr. Saraf presented facts concerning the social, economic, and private life of the people of India. He particularly emphasized education in India, showing how education improved after India gained her independence.

Mr. Saraf is living on the campus, as his wife, Dr. Kusum Saraf, is a resident physician at Madison Sanitarium and Hospital.

Carol Burchard, former Madison student who is teaching her first school at Tullahoma, was introduced to the group at the beginning of the party by Richard Kuhnau, president of T.O.T. As she related a few of her experiences, she revealed her enthusiasm for teaching.

SCAVENGER HUNT FEATURED

A scavenger hunt and a spaghetti supper were the attractions of Saturday evening's program for the Business Club on November 17. The Demonstration Building was the meeting place for directions, and the home of Mr. Worth Lowder, club sponsor, the destination after the hunt.

Paul Nettland and his group were the first to arrive at the Lowders with their list completed. Next came Charlie Myers' group, with their list complete. Elder Stewart's group came in last with everything on their list except the price of a 1957 Chevrolet and Bob Sellman's red coat.

All received prizes—lollipops. Those who arrived first were awarded a chocolate cake, and a small gift went to each in the car.

After playing a few games, they enjoyed spaghetti and vegetarian meat balls, French bread and butter, and ginger ale with pineapple sherbet.

The club party was planned by Florine Gant, president of the Business Club, Norma Googe, chairman of the social committee, Adolph Arellano, Lucy Courter, and Sylvia Burk. Joe Adams was the chief cook. There were 30 persons present.

STEARNS HOST TO AG CLUB

Games, fun, and refreshments—all combined to make the first Agriculture Club party a success. The party was held at the home of the sponsor, Mr. James Stearns, and he and his wife, as host and hostess, made everyone present feel very much at home.

The fireplace, with its brightly burning logs, made a cheerful background for the pantomimes presented in turn by each one. A number of parlor games were also played.

Refreshments of ice cream floats and cookies were served.

Home and School Sponsors Festival

Those who did not go to the college gym on the evening of November 24 missed a big time, according to the teachers, parents, and students who were there.

The first Annual Fall Festival was sponsored by the Home and School Association under the leadership of Mrs. Roy Bowes and her assistants and of the campus school, headed by Principal Barney and the three other teachers.

The gym had been transformed by booths and crepe paper to make the occasion a festive one. The pupils in the church school helped erect the booths, decorate them, and make signs to designate what would be sold and where.

Homemade burgers, salads, cakes, cookies, and drinks were to be had in several booths. A white elephant sale was gaily held in another booth around the room. Then one could stop and have his blood pressure taken, go across the gym and have his weight guessed, stop for a doughnut or two if many calories were permitted, and end up his evening playing a game of ring toss, darts, or ping pong, or quietly viewing movies.

Food, camera equipment, and white elephant items were among the many things donated. Space does not permit naming the donors, but Mrs. Bowes takes this means of thanking everyone who gave, as well as those who came and participated.

After expenses were paid, a net gain of $250.00 was realized, plus an evening of fun and fellowship. The money is to be used for church school equipment.

Student Prayer Band Meets Daily

The Hour of Power, student prayer band, meets on every school day at 12:35 p.m. for a devotional service. Each week a different student is in charge of the service, which does not follow any set pattern. Usually the leader presents some thought or experience, and then the members present personal problems or requests for prayer for others. Always there is singing, and the prayer hour is closed by a prayer service in which all who wish participate.

STARCH and STRIPES

At last we all have the inside story of what was going on last summer on North Hall. With "Observers" putting signs on everyone, and then writing down what each one was doing once every fifteen minutes for eight hours, it did make us feel a wee bit nervous—that is, until we found out what it was all about.

Miss Jessie Scott, from the Nursing Resources Division of the Public Health Department in Washington, D.C., was here from November 19 to 21 to help interpret to the nursing personnel and hospital administrators the purpose and results of this Nurse Utilization-Activities Survey, thus far. We learned that this is a non-critical study to find out at what skill level various nursing and related activities are being performed in this hospital, and in what areas.

In terms of the future, this survey has one meaning to the administration; to us, another. This report reveals to us, individually, the importance of each one of us functioning within his own skill level, in order that we may give our patients the best quality of nursing care, and in the most efficient and economical manner possible.

From now on, if you should see any of the seniors in Mrs. Clapp's Professional Trends class with an Observer's sign on and a pad and pencil in hand, you will know what they are up to.

Have you noticed lately how neat Woodrow Ek looks in his uniforms? It seems that the laundry is giving him some kind of "security."

Many of us do not realize that these clinical notebooks can be such a nightmare at times. Recently, Gertrud Schramm was awakened rather abruptly by the fire alarm. Still in a daze, she began searching frantically for her clinical notebook. Imagine her relief when she realized it was only a drill!

Banquet for Medics

The academy and college home economics classes, under the direction of their instructor, Mrs. Felix A. Lorenz, Sr., served a banquet to more than fifty C.M.E. graduates and their wives on Saturday evening, November 10. The banquet was held in the dining room of the newly decorated and refurbished Nutrition Laboratory.

Thanksgiving was the motif for the occasion, as evidenced by room and table decorations and the menu.

The occasion was the annual banquet of graduates of the College of Medical Evangelists who live in this vicinity. The classes planned, prepared, and served the entire meal.

Meet the Seniors

Dorothy
Cantrell

If you see a dark-haired, blue-eyed girl with a friendly smile and a hello for everyone, you will recognize her as Dorothy Ann Cantrell.

Dorothy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Opie Cantrell in Vian, Oklahoma, on May 14, 1939, and spent most of her life there until she came to Madison when she was in the eighth grade.

Being very active in school life, Dorothy has held the offices of secretary in the junior class and temperance secretary, and she is now the president of the academy choir.

Dot's hobbies are skating and music, and she has chosen nursing as her career.

No one would ever recognize Donald Cantrell as the innocent little blue-eyed, brown-haired boy born to Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Cantrell in Vian, Oklahoma, eighteen years ago.

Donald
Cantrell

He has lived most of his life here at Madison, working his way through grade school on the farm with his father.

He is the star pitcher for the high-school baseball team, and, needless to say, his favorite hobby is baseball.

Virginia
Cantrell

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Cantrell received a real bundle of joy when Virginia was born on February 21, 1936, in La Mesa, New Mexico.

After spending sixteen years in Oklahoma, the Cantrells moved to Georgia, where they live now.

This is Virginia's first year at Madison. At Gotzian home, where she is monitor, all the girls love her. She is a fine addition to our senior class.

Editors' note: These three seniors are cousins, no two belonging to the same family.

DON'T DROP THAT TRASH HERE! Can't you wait until you get to the trash can at the corner?

Few of our academy students stop and think when they throw down chewing gum, popsicle sticks, and candy wrappers on our beautiful lawn.

If they would consider the time and effort that goes into keeping up our campus, they would not be so hasty in helping destroy this beauty.

★ While we're reminiscing, what did you think of the snow we had on Thanksgiving? It makes you think of the old Thanksgiving sleigh rides grandmother used to tell about.

★ Speaking of rides! Ann Luck has just taken a long ride to Texas for the Thanksgiving holidays. Harrie Brown and Sue Brown also went home.

★ Oh, guess whom I saw today? Douglas Evans. Seeing Douglas makes us seniors think about those good old eighth-grade days.

Academy Wins

If you are one that stayed home by the fireplace Thanksgiving Day and wondered how cold it was outside, just ask some of the girls that were watching the football game in Wilson's pasture. It must have been pretty chilly by the looks of things. Blankets were used to keep from freezing and a bonfire was built. We hope some don't get laryngitis from all the screaming.

Although the academy got off to a slow start, they rallied and won the game 19-6. Touchdowns for the academy team were made by Don Meister, Rhea Harvey, and Jon Mac Randall.

Dean Wike (absent with leave from the hospital) was the referee for the game.

The college has challenged the academy to another game after Thanksgiving vacation when some of their players have returned from Thanksgiving vacation. The academy has great hopes of winning again.

Youth Sabbath School

The youth Sabbath school, under the direction of Mrs. Culpepper, is boasting the largest attendance ever during this school year.

Superintendents were chosen by the Sabbath school members and include a representative from each academy class. They are Eugene Wedel, freshman; Shirley Creighton, sophomore; Eddie Smothermon, junior; and Donald Cantrell, senior.

A new plan is being tried, that of having academy students teach the classes with college students supervising. This plan seems to have stimulated more interest in the class discussion and better attendance.

Two New Classes

"Cadet Teaching"

Jean Ruppel, Harrie Brown, Janet Harper, and Sue Brown are the four members of the cadet teaching class. This is a new subject being offered in the high school.

Each girl is assigned to one of the church school rooms for a period of six weeks. The cadets help grade papers and are considered to be teachers' helpers. One day a week they spend in the class room.

The girls receive one unit of credit for the time spent in this class. All of them report this to be one of their favorite classes.

Bookkeeping

Mr. Alfred Tucker is teaching the new class in bookkeeping. There are nine members in the class. It meets five days a week and receives one unit of credit.

The class, although offered originally to only juniors and seniors, is being taken by seven freshmen and two sophomores because of the heavy schedule of the upper classmen.

All the members are working hard but enjoy the subject.

Home Ec Entertains

A banquet was given on Saturday evening, November 10, by the home ec department for doctors and their wives.

The students prepared for this occasion by fixing up the Nutrition Laboratory. Painting the room was the biggest job, but with everyone helping it was lots of fun. Ann, you really looked sharp in those white coveralls. New curtains were made, and the floor cleaned and waxed. It looked like a different place.

While the guests were arriving Saturday night, the students were busy in the kitchen preparing the food. The menu consisted of jello salad, roast, potatoes, broccoli, spoon bread, and hot rolls. For dessert, date nut loaf with whipped cream was served.

After most of the serving was done, everyone sat around the big table in the back dining room and ate the left-over dessert and drank postum.

"We've got to get the dishes done," were the words heard from the kitchen; so everyone got back to work. Evidently Lois Gant did not want to wash dishes very badly, by the way she pretended to faint. Maybe if she practices a little more, she will do it perfectly next time.

The work being mostly done, everyone finished the evening by playing "Pit" and eating candy.
