New Workers Join College Staff

Madison College is welcoming, from time to time this summer, new teachers and industrial department workers.

Mr. and Mrs. Eusey

The Euseys have returned to Madison after an absence of nine years. Mr. Eusey, who holds a master's degree in agriculture from Michigan State College, has been connected with the agriculture program at Oak Park, Bethel, and Shenandoah Valley academies, Madison College, Atlantic Union College, and Blue Mountain Academy.

Mrs. Eusey has had wide experience in teaching, both in academy and college, in the fields of music, secretarial science, home economics, and Spanish. She will head the Secretarial Science Department at Madison this year.

Mr. Herman

Mr. James K. Herman, a Madison graduate of 1947, comes from California with his wife and four children to head the Industrial Education Department. His teaching experience includes service at Lodi and Sacramento Union academies and in high school. Mrs. Herman is the former Charmaine Manzano, whose parents have long been connected with the sanitarium here.

Mr. Brashears

Mr. and Mrs. George Brashears and three daughters have also returned to Madison College. Mr. Brashears was formerly a student and also superintendent of grounds and head of the home rental department. After spending nine years as superintendent of a printing house in eastern Tennessee, he has returned to take over the grounds services of the sanitarium, the college, and the home rental areas.

Mr. Lea

Mr. Dwight Lea, the father of the twins, Betty and Bonny, comes to Madison with many years of experience in fruit growing and gardening to take charge of that section of the college agricultural program. Mrs. Lea, a registered nurse, is filling a responsible place in the hospital.

Mr. Vega

Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Vega and three children have been on the campus for a number of weeks. Mr. Vega, who graduated from

Nurses Receive Caps and Insignia

Twenty-three sophomore nurses were received into the nursing profession on Sunday night, July 10, at the semi-annual capping ceremony of the School of Nursing. The nurses are pictured as they appeared after they had received their caps and insignia and had lighted their lamps from the lamp carried by Florence Nightingale.

Group Attends Regional Meeting At New Michigan Layman's School

BY FAY ELLER

Seventeen students and teachers and interested laymen attended a regional meeting of the Madison-affiliated self-supporting units, held at Oak Haven, the new layman's training school and sanitarium being established at Pullman, Michigan. The school is under the leadership of Elder W. E. Straw, Elder Ben Glanzer, and Ralph Martin.

The meetings were held in Griswold Auditorium, a few miles from the school. Elder N. C. Wilson, president of the Michigan Conference, was the speaker at the opening meeting on Friday night. On Sabbath Elder J. D. Smith, Lake Union Conference president, spoke.

The afternoon was spent in listening to experiences of God's workings, told by leaders and workers from the units. The units represented were Madison College; Pewee Valley, Kentucky; Fletcher, North Carolina; Cave Springs Home for Children, Tennessee; Laurelbrook, Tennessee; Little Creek, Tennessee; El Reposo, Alabama; Lawrenceburg, Tennessee; Wytheville, Virginia; Hylandale, Wisconsin; Pine Forest, Mississippi; Rural Life Institute, Savannah, Tennessee; the Shrocks from Alaska; Wildwood, Georgia; and other self-supporting workers. The Layman Foundation was also represented.

On Saturday night a beautiful sacred music program was presented, which was followed by pictures of the schools and sanitariums.

On Sunday morning Elder Felix Lorenz, now at Wytheville, Virginia, conducted the morning devotions, and at nine o'clock Elder Frazee, from Wildwood, spoke. Then followed more experiences from the schools.

The visitors enjoyed a tour of historical scenes and points of interest in the Battle Creek area on Sunday afternoon. Some of the places visited were the Battle Creek Sanitarium, the First and Second Seventh-day Adventist churches, Battle Creek Academy, the J. N. Loughborough home, the home of Elder and Mrs. James White, Oak Hill Cemetery, where many pioneers are buried, including Elder and Mrs. White.

Oak Haven is directed and controlled by responsible Seventh-day Adventist church members, who

College Seniors Camp At Center Hill Lake

BY LILA RING

The college seniors spent the weekend of July 8-10 at Center Hill Lake, where the new MV youth camp, Indian Creek Camp, is located.

The highlights of the Sabbath were a campfire vesper service with Elder Dopp as speaker, Sabbath school under the direction of Pat Silver, with Norma Umali, Harley and Laura Mae Slattery, and Mr. Keplinger taking part, the church service at which Elder Lindsay spoke and the Walper family furnished special music, and hiking through the woods in the afternoon.

Sunday morning climaxed the weekend of recreation, as Elder Dopp was there with his motorboat and skis. The morning was filled with activity—skiing, canoeing, swimming, and the sunburns that resulted.

Everyone enjoyed the outdoor camping experience. The Walpers just made up their bed in the back of their Rambler and slept in style until Leslie got tangled up in the horn about 3:00 a.m.

July 9 was the first month anniversary for the newlyweds of the class—Ronnie and June Schmale. So as a point of initia-

Thank You!

Volunteer writers and reporters are responsible for most of the articles in the summer issues of the MADISONIAN. Their willingness to help, in the absence of the regular staff members, is much appreciated, as is also the help Carolyn Combs has given in making assignments and gathering material. Carolyn and Eufemio Cabalo have also spent many hours in addressing and mailing the MADISONIAN.

We welcome our new dean, Mrs. Watson, and her family to Williams Hall. We want her to know how much we think of her already. We love her for her pleasant, friendly ways, her beautiful smile, and her sweet, Christian character. We also welcome Carol Rose and Donald Roy. And we mustn't forget her fish, which add much to the dorm parlor.

The new system of checking rooms is very effective. On Friday afternoon four boys check the girls' rooms. From the amount of cleaning and waxing that goes on, we believe that the plan works well. Congratulations, Peggy Capps and Carol Taylor, for having the cleanest room in Williams Hall on the first inspection day.

My, how the paint has been flying! Our dean has arranged it so that the girls can get paint for their rooms if they will do their own painting. The dorm rooms are blossoming with many beautiful shades. It really is surprising what a little paint can do for a drab room.

Talent Program Pleases

The talent program Saturday night brought to light varied and unusual talent among our student group. Terry Sweeny, M.C., did a wonderful job.

It was a jovial group who played and sang "Old Suzanna" and "De Camptown Races." David Wilson, Jerome Kowalski, Jo Anderson, Nita Lanham, Corrine Bunch, Isabelle Altenbrun, and Dorothy Chase were the participants in this novelty.

The program went on with music from Joe Fields on his accordion, from Rowena Felts on her violin, and from Billy Nickless and Theresa Walters with accordion and guitar duet. Paul Steen and his sweetheart, David Kingry, had car trouble when their tires—Bob Kohler, Donald Roy Watson, Elwood Johnson, and Tom Bates—went flat. Also Duane Archer and Bill Wilson did a spectacular job on their balancing and tumbling acts.

And from Japan were featured the Fujita brothers, David and Harry. When Harry sang in his native language there weren't many who understood the words, but we enjoyed the numbers anyway.

After some other parts on the program, to end the evening our dean, Mrs. Watson, read to us a poem she had written about Madison College. Then we were served popcorn and juice for refreshments.

Mrs. Doris Thomson and Mrs. Virginia Sellers will attend a workshop on psychiatric nursing. These courses are being offered as refresher courses for nurse teachers.

Mrs. Doris Thomson has just returned from a short vacation trip to Indiana, visiting with relatives. Likewise many students have returned from vacation, some feeling the need for another, and some feeling refreshed and ready again for good hard work!

You may be interested to know that we have just passed the day marking the centennial of the beginning of the first professional school for nurses at St. Thomas Hospital, London. It was July 9 when the first 15 probationers were admitted for their one-year course of training in the now famed "Nightingale School."

M & S II class have a field trip scheduled for July 22 to the Junior League Home for Crippled Children in Nashville, which is supported by voluntary contributions and does a wonderful work in educating the crippled child to adjust to and work with his handicap.

Mrs. Freda Zeigler, director of the School of Nursing, has been studying at Peabody College for Teachers this summer, and though she is studying long hours, she reports, "It is wonderfully cool in the library. I have worn a sweater all summer." The library, incidentally, is where she spends the major portion of the day.

While the twenty-three sophomore students are proudly getting used to the feel of caps on their heads, and maybe soliloquizing on how best they can serve their profession now that they are fully fledged student nurses, the senior students, with just five more weeks till graduation, are about to sink down in their chairs with a big sigh of relief, realizing that their hard work is nearly over. But is it? If nursing is your calling, and not merely your vocation, there is much more ahead, but also much joy and satisfaction in knowing, as Florence Nightingale put it, that your calling is of God and, we may add, in working in collaboration with Him.

An improvement project is under way in the dormitories. This is more or less a do-it-yourself project, since most of the work is to be done on a volunteer basis. New fluorescent lights have been installed in the lower hall at Gotzian, and putting tile on the hallway and parlor floors and asbestos shingles in the place of the wooden ones on the upper story of Gotzian is still in the planning stages. As the summer progresses, we shall transform our dormitories into more pleasant living quarters.

Charles Tremper, Gotzian's new monitor, is doing a fine job and is keeping everything running smoothly.

The fellows are enjoying the recreational opportunities this summer. Volleyball seems to be the favorite sport so far, with baseball coming next. Of course everyone looks forward to and enjoys the swimming pool on these hot, sticky days.

Our housekeeping is improving and our rooms are looking much, much better since the girls from Williams Hall and Magan Home are checking rooms each Friday.

Our newest resident of the dormitory is Surinder Deol, from India.

At times it is hard not to be a little envious of some of our number who have had vacations for a part of the summer or who have had vacations from classes all summer. Here we are, attending classes and doing assignments for ten weeks. We are glad, though, to be able to go to school this summer.

Eller—Boyd

Kay Eller and Ronald Boyd were married at Tampa, Florida, on May 10. The Boyds have connected with the Rural Life Association at Pullman, Michigan.

Goldberg—Smailus

Eva Goldberg and Gunter Smailus were married at Hollywood, California, on May 15. Mr. Smailus is an electronic engineer. Eva plans to finish the nursing course.

Seibert—Eaton

Ruby Seibert and Robert Eaton were married at Sanger, California, on June 12. Ruby and Robert will teach church school in Oregon during the coming school year.

Alexander—Clark

Maloa Alexander and Ross Clark were married at Ringgold, Georgia, on June 21. The couple will reside at Collegedale, where Ross will continue his pre-medical studies.

Madison College in 1954, returns to teach in the Biology Department and to work in the clinical laboratory. After leaving here in 1954, he attended Southern Missionary College, served as a medical technologist in the Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, hospital, and then spent a year at Peabody College, where he earned his master's degree.

Mr. Cox

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cox and two daughters come to Madison from Scottsburg, Indiana. Mr. Cox is the new manager of the college garage. He has had many years of experience in this type of work, having operated a garage for twelve years and having worked as a welder for five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson

Mr. L. A. Watson, who was here for a brief time when he moved his family into Williams Hall a few weeks ago, will join the staff in September to teach Bible in the academy. A graduate of Atlantic Union College, he has been a pastor in the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference and has also spent three years in the mission field of Bay Islands, Honduras, Central America.

Mrs. Watson, a former secretary to Elder E. L. Cardey, of the Southern Union Bible School, is the new dean of women and has already made herself a part of the Williams Hall family of girls. The Watsons' daughter, Carol Rose, and son, Donald Roy, are here with them, and an older son, Lanier, is at Southern Missionary College.

The senior trip ended Sunday night, though it is reported that some extended their vacation because their sunburns were so severe they could not wear clothes.

Let's Get Acquainted... MADISON FOODS

BY IRVING TITSWORTH

The home of Madison Foods. Insert: Dr. P. A. Webber, manager

A living testimony to the efficacy of a proper diet is the radiant robustness of Dr. P. A. Webber, director and manager of Madison Foods, Madison, Tennessee, located on the campus of Madison College. It was my privilege to interview this enthusiastic, seventy-year-young man.

I found Dr. Webber walking in his garden, back of his home on Sanitarium Drive. As I admired his beautiful flowers, I wondered whether he had not transferred to our campus a bit of the beauty of the lovely gardens in Japan, a country where he and Mrs. Webber labored for so many years.

Upon his return from a fourteen-year term of service in Japan in 1927, Dr. Webber visited Madison College to learn more about the institution. In talking with him, Dr. E. A. Sutherland asked him, "Do you know anything about soy beans?"

Dr. Webber said he laughed as he replied, "I suppose I have eaten about a ton of them. The Japanese never eat a meal without soy beans, even breakfast."

Dr. Sutherland continued the soy bean conversation: "We believe that the soy bean has the answer to the problem of an alternate to the use of meat, milk, and eggs, when these animal-origin foods shall become unsafe."

Learning of Dr. Webber's interest in food chemistry, Dr. Sutherland encouraged him to take advanced work and prepare to teach in the new four-year Madison College that was replacing the junior college. The result was that Dr. Webber went to Michigan State University, where he studied nutritional chemistry, bio-chemistry, and food chemistry, received his Ph.D. degree, and returned to Madison to teach.

When I asked Dr. Webber to tell me about the establishment of Madison Foods, he told me the following story:

"About the year 1914 Mrs. White wrote to Doctors Magan and Sutherland and told them that they should buy a health food factory then operated by the conference and move it to Madison College. It was located at Amqui Junction, on the L. and N. railroad. The factory had been making peanut butter, nut-meat, Granola, and a breakfast food called Dixie Kernel. This latter was made in the large two-story oven that we still use, now as a freezing unit. Mrs. Druillard operated the food factory until she founded the Riverside Sanitarium in 1924."

After returning from a third term of service in Japan, during which time he founded a self-supporting school at Mt. Akagi, Dr. Webber was asked to take over the management of the food factory.

I learned that the main sources of their raw materials are the Virginia and North Carolina tide-water areas for soy beans, a carload of them every two months. The gluten comes from a high-protein spring wheat.

The twelve varieties of high-protein foods manufactured by Madison Foods are Zoyburger, Stakelets, Not-Meat, Vigorost, Yum, Cheze-O-Soy, Nu-Steak, Dinner Morsels, Madison Burger, Sandwich Loaf, Sandwich Spread, and Soy Beans in Tomato Sauce. The foods are sold all over the United States by health food stores, jobbers, Dorcas societies, and campmeeting stores. They are shipped to the Pacific Coast in carload lots to save freight. The demand for them is growing steadily and Dr. Webber says there are plans for putting several new foods on the market.

This Madison College industry is prospering under the management of Dr. Webber. President Sandborn says: "Madison Foods, under the leadership of Dr. P. A. Webber, has made tremendous strides during the last year. Every indication points to the operation of the plant with a nice gain for the present fiscal year. We commend Dr. Webber for his excellent work and want him to know that we appreciate having him as a fellow worker at Madison."

Up And Down The Campus

By BERTHA WAY KING

July, the patriot month, proudly shows another star on Old Glory and brightly gleams that 50th one. . . . The sun smiled and red-faced (and red-backed) seniors returned to the campus after an outing at the Indian Creek Junior Camp on Center Hill. Having due respect for the sun now is Alice Surdahl, who received a deep tanning. . . . Shirley Burk, class of '58, on a European tour this summer, writes: "What a surprise to find the Hassenpflugs and the Gills on the tour." She tells of visiting the homes of Wordsworth, Shakespeare, and Samuel Johnson thus far. They spent Sabbath at Newbold Missionary College, 30 miles southwest of London. "The women's dormitory is an old castle. That has us all fascinated," she enthusiastically writes. . . . With the latest capping service over and no caps lost, Barbara Hill was reminded of her capping when her cap almost fell off. . . . Nurse Betty Brooks asked, "What do you do when your patients are asleep and it is time for the 11 o'clock temp?" Classmate Newell Brown had the same question, for he hated to awaken his patient, Orville Gill. . . . Mr. Gill's sudden illness brought his wife, Mary, home for a few days from her nursing affiliating duties at Cincinnati. . . . Albert Isom, one of the latest fathers, is pleasantly surprised that his brand-new daughter now at home sleeps all night. He had looked slightly worried while viewing her through the nursery window having a good cry. . . . Dave Gunderson displays a "GI crew-cut" as the best hair style for summer time comfort in X-raying duties. . . . Keiko Yoshimura has a cute way of requesting someone to come after a patient's tray at the San Kitchen: "Could you take after it?" . . . From away out West the Richard Mitzelfelts write that the deer and the mountain goat play in their front yard and the porcupine, too. Daughter Darla, turning 14 months, is cutting more teeth and saying, "See." Her daddy drives truck for the Mt. Rainier Forest Service (Washington state), and her mother, Carole, is a wee bit lonesome for Madison College friends and relatives. . . . Senior nursing student Gypsy Lawson, from Columbus, Georgia, is "mighty proud" of her husband, Staff Sergeant Charles. While participating in an army air force jump meet with 60 other service men, he landed on the target from a parachute jump of 1900 feet—out of a helicopter. The meet was at Pope Field, North Carolina. Charles is stationed at the Sewart Air Force Base and this was his first jump in two years. . . . In your busy campus life, pause often for awhile to pledge allegiance to your Creator, thanking Him for the land of the free and the bright stars of Liberty.

1960-61 MV LEADERS

We are happy and proud to introduce our new student leaders for the coming academic year. Our leader will be Wilma Keller. Her associates will be Kay Forrester, Eufemio Cabalo, and Charles Tremper. Her secretary will be Pauline Romo. With this fine group of enthusiastic leaders, we know that the MV society will accomplish great things.

PROGRAMS SLATED UP TO SEPT. 2

The next eight programs are already released and "ready to go." They include plenty of variety and talent, ranging from interesting panel discussions to a dramatic presentation of the judgment, from an out-of-doors singspiration to "YOU" being on trial in a thrilling and impressive program. You won't want to miss any of these programs.

MV NEWS BULLETIN

Five numbers have been issued during the last five months, and they have met a ready response, particularly from those who otherwise would not be kept in touch with all of the society's activities. The next release will be in October, and bigger and even better plans are afoot for this interesting bulletin.
