Madison Institutions Collection

Collection 167

Scope and Content

The History

The Madison institutions represented a large effort by Seventh-day Adventist leaders and laymen to develop what became known as the self-supporting work. The leader, Edward A. Sutherland, together with Percy T. Magan and M. Bessie DeGraw, came together in Michigan and moved on to Madison, Tennessee. They were reform minded leaders who wished to follow the counsels of Ellen G. White regarding educational methods and work-school plans.

Through the years the Nashville Agricultural and Normal Institute became Madison College. At Madison, the campus grew to include a sanitarium, a farm, a food factory, and several other industries. The concept of self-supporting institutions grew to include nearly 40 outpost schools, and even today continues in some areas of the Seventh-day Adventist Church membership. In addition to schools, there were sanitariums and large city treatment rooms, vegetarian cafeterias, and food factories spread across the southern portion of the United States.

The educational methods differed from most schools and students attending the schools were required to work half of the day and study the other half. Some of the other key principles followed by the self-supporting groups include missionary training, self-government, work and study, faculty and staff working side by side with the students, and those students without money could work their way through school. The self-supporting movement eventually led to an office at the General Conference, the Association of Self-Supporting Institutions, or A.S.I.

The Nashville Agricultural and Normal Institute began in 1904 when Sutherland and Magan felt called to work for the people of the south. Ellen White encouraged this through her writings and speaking as well as being intimately involved in the founding of the Madison school. The Board for the Madison school was the only such body she was ever willing to be a member. White directed in the purchase of the original farm as well as encouraging the establishment of medical work and a food factory.

The 1930s are considered the high point for the Madison self-supporting concept. Sutherland led the institutions from its founding until his death in 1955. By the late 1950s, for a variety of reasons, the institutions faced a very challenging financial situation. This led ultimately in 1964 to the closing of Madison College; Madison Sanitarium and Hospital continued to function until it was sold some years later.

The Collection

Over the years five different collections, from five different sources, related to Madison Institutions were received by the Andrews University Center for Adventist Research. Three of them were commonly called, Madison Institutions, one was Edward

A. Sutherland, and the last one was from the Madison College Alumni Association, which was received in 2013. In reviewing all five collections it was found they really should be merged together into one collection due to the extensive overlap of their contents. For example, institutional correspondence by E. A. Sutherland was found in three of the collections. Financial and business records were in more than one collection as were minutes and publications of the institution. At this point it is hard to understand how the collections initially came to be broken up, but it seemed best now to reunite them to create a larger picture and story of all that was Madison. The collections received are:

- Collection 084 Edward A. Sutherland [3.75 linear feet]
- Collection 085 Madison Institutions (1) [1.6 linear feet]
- Collection 138 Madison Institutions (2) [19.6 linear feet]
- Collection 167 Madison Institutions (3) [11.25 linear feet]
- new Madison College Alumni Association [51.0 linear feet]

Included in the collection are large amounts of E. A. Sutherland correspondence, and the correspondence of other leaders of Madison, from those at Battle Creek College, from W. C. White, and others from before and a little after the turn of the 20th century. There are also several linear feet of various high level minutes from Madison Institutions. Also included are Bulletins from the school(s), financial reports, other reports, topical files, faculty lists, alumni lists, and a wide variety of other materials associated with the Madison operation. Taken together, this collection is essentially what is left of the business archives of the Madison Institutions. This collection provides a strong picture of Madison College and the various associated institutions. It is also possible to gain a very good insight into the work of Edward A. Sutherland through the large quantity of correspondence and business records, since Sutherland and Madison were intricately intertwined.

The Sutherland correspondence especially is in very fragile condition with the paper having a very high acidic content which will not stand much use. The bulk of the paper in the collection appears to be in line with paper from that era in that it is OK for careful use.

Arrangement

As this is a collection comprised of five different groups of materials brought together and forged into one collection, the arrangement was imposed by the Center for Adventist Research during the organization of the collection. Please see the following listing of series and sub-series to better understand the arrangement as well as the content of the collection.

Provenance

The contents of this collection came to the Center for Adventist Research in five groups over a span of more than 30 years. One group came via George Knight in 1984 when he loaded up his car and brought a load to Andrews University. Other segments came from various individuals at different times. The largest single segment, the portion from the Madison College Alumni Association, came in March and May of 2013.

Use

All users of this collection are required to complete the "Request to Use Personal Papers Collections," and to observe the regulation specified in the "Researcher's Agreement" and "Researcher's Code of Conduct." All records in this collection are open and available for research. Citation for this collection:

Audio-Visuals

Audio-Tape (reel to reel) Recordings.

Most appear to be in some numerical sequence, perhaps a meeting or convention. There is no information about the possible meeting, except one of the unnumbered tapes says, "1955 Convention." Another can lid (#11) says, "KMHL, Oct. 2, 1955." Tapes are notated as to speaker, but many are difficult or impossible to decipher, thus the unusual names that follow. Numbering on the tapes is uncertain because some have two different numbers. The lettered tapes may actually fit the gaps in the numbered tapes, but that is uncertain without listening to them, which was not done during this processing.

Physical condition of the tapes. They were very dirty at the time of processing. There was an effort to clean off the outside grime, but no effort to clean the actual tape. A number of the tapes are paper-based magnetic tape with the remainder the more conventional polyester based tape. The paper-based tape broke readily in our playback equipment. The fidelity of either tape is very poor almost to the point of indecipherable.

- Tape 1 Larinsby (?), Peck, Conard, Joneses
- Tape 2 Louis Hanson, Mrs. Enock (first half only; music second half)
- Tape 3 Fred Black & wife; O. R. Staines, Ulanda & Leonard Brunie, Elar Jacobsen
- Tape 4 BI Noble-Staudish, Dr. Lillian
- Tape 5 End of Dr. Lillian, Robinson girls—Ann— (?), Yeoman

Objects

Bausch and Lomb Optical Company, Model C Balopticon. Said to be a glass slide projector. Lacks portions of the bellows and a lens.

Specimen Slides from Kenneth Sheriff in a box designed to hold specimen slides. There were 48 slides but the legend says there should have been 78. The actual specimen was gone leaving only a pink smudge from the coloring agent
