New England Sanitarium and Hospital Records (Collection 374)

History

In 1895, one of South Lancaster Academy's dormitories was transformed into a sanitarium, and four years later, in 1899, received its first charter with the name, The New England Sanitarium and Benevolent Association. After a few years, the Thayer family, concerned that the sight of sick people in wheelchairs sitting outside the sanitarium was becoming an eyesore, offered to purchase the land on which the sanitarium was erected, and pay for the dismantling of the building so the lumber could be used to erect a new building, so long as it was not in South Lancaster. Meanwhile, Ellen White, then in Australia, wrote to the General Conference regarding a property near Spot Pond in the Middlesex Fells Reservation, Melrose, Massachusetts, that she had seen in vision. The Langwood Hotel was on that property. Formerly a hotbed of illegal gambling and cockfighting, after a fire in 1902 it was purchased and transformed into a sanitarium. In 1904, Mr. Thayer paid for the transportation of the lumber from the old building, on his own railroad, to the new location. This was used to build the east wing of the sanitarium.

Initially, the sanitarium attracted a mostly wealthy clientele, serving both as a hospital and a resort in which people could escape from the hectic life of the city and spend time resting their nerves in the beautiful surroundings of Spot Pond. Although this provided needed income, it also came with troubles. Although "Melrose" was on the sanitarium's advertising, the property was technically in the town of Stoneham, and almost immediately, there was trouble between the town council and the sanitarium regarding the question of taxation. The town felt that the sanitarium was not a charity, and passed several laws in the state legislature to force it to pay taxes. These laws resulted in several lawsuits between the two, and culminated in a battle over whether or not the sanitarium treated "nervous disease," which was finally resolved in 1932 with a ruling in favor of the sanitarium, and a settlement that appeased both sides. This resulted in the hospital treating more and more "charity cases," patients who could not pay full cost for services.

In addition to being a hospital and resort, the sanitarium was also a training school for nurses. The first class of nurses graduated in 1901, with another class each year through 1965, when the nursing program was transferred to Atlantic Union College. In addition to the regular training of the day, students were trained in natural remedies, including hydrotherapy and electrotherapy. This training also included clinicals at other area hospitals to train students in areas not commonly treated at the sanitarium, including pediatrics, nervous and mental disease, and for male students, urology.

Over the years, the sanitarium continued to upgrade and become a modern hospital. In 1967, the sanitarium changed its name to New England Memorial Hospital, and quickly replaced its emphasis on hydrotherapy and natural remedies with an emphasis on modern medicine. In 1995, the hospital again changed its name to Boston Regional Medical Center, but this name was short-lived. In a shock to the Stoneham community, in 1999 the hospital suddenly announced bankruptcy, and by 2000, everything Seventh-day Adventist was gone from the property. Today (2022), the property is still mostly vacant and run down, with a few doctors' offices leasing part of the hospital building.

Portions of this biography come from "A History of The New England Memorial Hospital" by Arthur Tauro, as well as a few other sources in this collection.

Scope

This is clearly not a complete archive of all New England Sanitarium et al records. However, what is included can be significant in understanding the development and work of the institution as well as changes over the years. It can also be instructive regarding the problems the entity faced.

The sanitarium (and hospital) is well represented as is the associated School of Nursing.

Arrangement

The the table of contents beginning on the next page for a fuller understanding of the arrangement of this collection of records.

Extent

8 Records Center Boxes (10 linear feet) + 60 different size cash and patient journal books (over size).

Provenance

The items in this collection were secured by Ted Jones, Atlantic Union Conference President, from the judge at the Bankruptcy Court when the hospital closed in February 1999. Herb and Rose Landa Crandal (class of 1940) packed the memorabilia, and Bud and Edna Rush Roberts (class of 1956) delivered it to Atlantic Union College. Upon the college's final closure in 2018, the Adventist portion of the Atlantic Union College Library contents, including a room full of New England Sanitarium and Hospital papers, photographs, and artifacts, were transferred in August 2020 by the Atlantic Union Conference to the Andrews University Center for Adventist Research.

Use [CAUTION]

All users of this collection will complete the Application to Use Unpublished Records, and observe the regulation specified in the Patron's Agreement and Researcher's Code of Conduct. Most records in this collection are open and available for research. However, care should be exercised with records in series VI. Patient and Guest Records. While most of these records show a name, there is little to nothing that truly invades privacy other than the fact that they were a patient. It is requested that Center for Adventist Research personnel be consulted BEFORE researching in this series. Please state your reason for researching, what information you will gather, and the intended purpose. The Center may restrict use of certain information, and will request to see what information you take with you.

Tax Lawsuits and Bankruptcy

Early Tax Cases

Much more information is here regarding the 1928 case, but prior to this there were several cases which dealt with the sanitarium paying taxes to the Town of Stoneham, stemming from a 1912 law, aimed in part at the sanitarium, making any institution that treated nervous, mental, contagious, or tubercular disease unable to be tax-exempt. Items in this category are those not pertaining to the final 1928 lawsuit.

Box 2 Fld 14 Correspondence from John L. Bates, Attorney, regarding Tax Case, 1919-1923.

Box 2 Fld 15 Correspondence from Oscar Storer, Attorney,

Box 2 Fld 16 Testimony of Chester L. Torrey.

1928 Tax Lawsuit

In New England Sanitarium and Benevolent Association vs. Inhabitants of the Town of Stoneham, the sanitarium sought to recover taxes paid by the sanitarium to the town after the town voted to tax the hospital in 1928. The question was whether the sanitarium, as a charitable organization, was required to pay taxes, and hinged on the question of whether or not the sanitarium treated nervous or mental cases. According to a 1912 law aimed partly at the Sanitarium, charitable hospitals in the area were not tax-exempt if they treated nervous, mental, contagious, or tubercular disease. The superior court appointed a commissioner to hear the case in 1931, and much of the content here are those proceedings. The commissioner, and the superior court, found in favor of the sanitarium. And after a 1932 settlement with the Town of Stoneham, in which some of the previously paid taxes were waived, and the town agreed to have the 1912 law repealed, the sanitarium remained both tax-exempt and able to treat the above diseases.

This series is presented in three parts, first the legal documents, second the documents produced by the sanitarium, and finally the correspondence and newspaper articles relating to the case.

1999 Bankruptcy

Prior to 1999, Boston Regional Medical Center owned and operated the property formerly belonging to the Sanitarium. Per the agreement, the Seventh-day Adventist Church continued to operate the New England Memorial Church and Greater Boston Academy on the property, and a few private individuals had offices there as well. In 1999, Boston

Regional Medical Center filed for bankruptcy and made the decision to sell the property to the Gutierrez Company. The original purchase agreement contained a provision that required that if the property was to be sold, it would be sold free and clear of any interest of the church and school. Boston Regional Medical Center filed an adversary proceeding in order to facilitate the vacation of the property so it could be sold. The parties opted to settle, and the Seventh-day Adventists vacated the property completely by summer of 2000.

VI. Patient and Guest Records [CAUTION]

These are the registration books and some records of medical operations and diseases. Most do not give patient information, and those that do are old enough that it is not felt that there is a need for confidentiality of patient records, as the most recent date for any medical information regarding a named patient is 1930.

However, care should be exercised. While most of these records show a name, there is little to nothing that truly invades privacy other than the fact that they were a patient. It is requested that Center for Adventist Research personnel be consulted BEFORE researching in this series. Please state your reason for researching, what information you will gather, and the intended purpose. The Center may restrict use of certain information, and will request to see what information you take with you.
