Uriah Smith/Mark Bovee Collection (Collection 146)

Introduction and Biographical

The Smith/Bovee collection is one of the most substantial familial collections of core early Sabbatarian Adventist materials in the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The collection contains two distinct types of materials: those relating to Uriah Smith (1832-1903) and his immediate family, and those of his grandson, Mark Leon Bovee (1899-1990). Together they complement each other by documenting three generations of life as Seventh-day Adventists.

This collection is, practically speaking, two separate collections merged into one. The first part pertains to Uriah Smith and his immediate family. The second part pertains to Uriah Smith's children following his death in 1903 and the life, activities, and interests of grandson Mark L. Bovee. While this is a merged collection, done so by Mark Bovee, it rather naturally falls into the above mentioned two parts.

Uriah Smith and his immediate family, to 1903

Uriah Smith was born (1832) in West Wilton, New Hampshire the youngest of four children born to Samuel (d. 1852) and Rebekah Smith (d. 1875). Samuel and Rebekah Smith became Millerites along with their son, Uriah. From 1848 to 1851 Uriah attended nearby Exeter Academy. About 1852 Uriah became a Sabbatarian Adventist, and the following year James White invited Uriah to join his older sister, Annie (1828-1855) to become a part of the Review and Herald staff in Rochester, New York. As James and Ellen White traveled they increasingly left the office in the charge of Annie and Uriah. Unfortunately, misfortune would strike in 1855 when Annie contracted tuberculosis and died. Later that year, Uriah moved, with the publishing staff and meager resources, to Battle Creek, Michigan. It was that same year that his name first appears as Editor of the Review and Herald, a position he held for more than 40 years.

At some point in the 1850s, Uriah met Harriet Newell Stevens (1831-1911), the daughter of Cyprian (1794-1858) and Almira T. Stevens (1803-1873). The Stevens family were well-known Adventists from Paris, Maine, with whom the Whites lived for a brief period in 1850. About 1855, the Stevens family moved west to Waukon, Iowa, where a number of other Adventists families had bought farms. On June 7, 1857, the couple were married by the first resident Adventist minister of Battle Creek, J. B. Frisbie. The newlyweds set up their home on a lot adjoining the publishing house.

As the fledgling church grew so did Uriah's responsibilities. Uriah was appointed an elder of the group that met in the Advent meeting house, and was ordained as an Adventist minister. As time went on, he became responsible not only as general editor of the Review, but also as proof reader, business manager, and bookkeeper. This overwork led in 1869 to his health breaking down, and this brought a well-needed change in the pace of life. By 1871 he had resumed his editorship of the Review, but left again in 1873 after a disagreement with James White. The Smiths moved to Grand Rapids, Michigan, for about 6 months where he worked as an engraver.

Despite these brief interludes, Uriah's vantage point as editor of the Review and Herald allowed him in a very special way to monitor and contribute to the organizational, theological, and spiritual development of the Seventh-day Adventist Church (organized officially in 1863). In the late 1880s, Uriah was a leading figure of the "old guard" holding out against the new emphasis coming into the church via the writings of E. J. Waggoner, A. T. Jones, and Ellen G. White. In time, and through the work of Ellen White, Uriah came around to the new focus God led the church to adopt following the 1888 General Conference Session and the events of the subsequent years. It was during these years that Uriah served as a theology professor at Battle Creek College. Besides being editor of the Review and Herald making him a household name among Seventh-day Adventists, Uriah also wrote a number of books, the primary one being what is now known as Daniel and the Revelation.

Uriah died suddenly, in March 1903, on his way to the office. At the age of 70 he was still working at the Review and Herald.

The collection reveals intimate details into the family life of the Smiths. After the Smiths returned to Battle Creek in 1873 they commissioned Adventist architect, O. B. Jones, to build them a large home. By that time the Smiths had four children: (Uriah Wilton (1861-1937); Leon Alberti (1863-1958); Annie Arabelle (1868-1952); and Samuel Parker (b. 1872). They soon afterward added a fifth son, Charles Stevens (1874-1954) to their home. Uriah, who had a knack for coming up with new inventions, sold his patent for an inward folding seat school desk to pay for this home. According to Mark L. Bovee's notes, after the home was finished, O. B. Jones had lost $3,000 on building the home for which Uriah reimbursed him—something which speaks of the integrity of Uriah. Harriet used the 14 rooms in this home to add additional income to their family income and to provide affordable housing for students at Battle Creek College (founded in 1874 and on whose board Uriah served as chairman of the board for many years). The Smiths believed in education and saw that a ready supply of books were always available in their home. Thirty-seven volumes are extant in this collection. [To see a list, do a title search of the James White Library catalog for "Uriah Smith Library Collection"]. Uriah and Harriet also took an interest in the lives of Adventist young people, informally adopting at least one student, Alma Wolcott (1860-1946). Given their close connection and interest in young people it is not surprising the large Smith home was the venue for scores of weddings over the years and Uriah officiated at many of them.

The Smith family loved to travel. This collection contains pictures of a family vacation to Mackinac Island in northern Michigan, trips to early Adventist camp meetings from the early 1870s, and a special trip by Uriah and his oldest son Wilton to Europe, Israel, and Egypt. One of the groups of correspondence in the collection are letters Uriah and Wilton sent home to their family in Battle Creek from Europe and the Middle East. It should be noted that some, perhaps most, photographs from the Uriah Smith portion of the collection have been removed from this collection and digitized, and are available via the Center for Adventist Research's photograph database. After digitization, photographs were filed in the Center's "P Collection." Inquire with Center staff if you seek access to print or physical photographs from this collection.

Post Uriah Smith, 1903 forward

A portion of this collection are items belonging to Annie Arabelle Smith, Uriah's daughter, and her immediate family. Annie graduated from Battle Creek High School in 1889, and afterward attended Battle Creek College, graduating in 1897. It was behind her house that she fell in love with George W. Bovee, who lived in the house directly behind her own. Annie and George were married in 1898 in the Smith home with her father, Uriah, officiating. Annie and George moved to a farm in nearby Bedford where they set up their own home. George continued farming until he was 86 years of age.

The largest portion of this part of the collection are materials relating to Mark L. Bovee (1899-1990), the oldest son of George and Annie Bovee. Mark inherited his grandfather's love for writing, and at an early age put together handwritten storybooks with illustrations. Mark attended the successor to Battle Creek College, Emmanuel Missionary College, where he graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1927. The following year, he married a recent graduate (1926) from the St. Helena Sanitarium School of Nursing, Eva Olena Nelson (1902-1977). Mark and Eva lived in Battle Creek where Mark worked for Battle Creek newspapers as a linotype operator and Eva as a nurse in the Sanitarium. This period was interrupted by a brief interlude from 1936 to 1938 when Mark worked at the Washington Missionary College Press in Takoma Park, Maryland.

Mark was an amateur Adventist historian who loved to collect stories about his family and other early Adventists. One of Mark's lifelong dreams was to write a biography of his grandfather, but it never materialized. However, through his many handwritten notebooks and more than 80 extant newspaper articles, one gets a glimpse into the life of the Smith family.

The Bovees were active in their local community. Mark served for several years during the 1950s and 1960s as communication secretary for the Battle Creek Tabernacle. As an active alumnus he gave both money and time to support Andrews University, his alma mater, serving on the alumni board and founding the first regional alumni chapter. He also made sure his voice was heard in local circles, writing many letters attempting to prevent the Battle Creek Sanitarium building from being torn down and fund-raising to purchase the James and Ellen White home on Wood Street. He was an active Republican writing to his local congressman and even to the United States president.

Eva Bovee died in 1977. Mark afterward married Esther Peterson who passed away in 1984. After her death he briefly married Ruth Christiansen, but they later divorced. One child, Ronald George, was born to Mark and Eva, that in 1940, but he died shortly after birth. Mark Bovee died in 1990 and is buried in Niebul Cemetery in Friendship, Wisconsin.

Scope and Content

As mentioned, this collection is divided into two parts: the time of Uriah Smith, and the time following his death in 1903. The first part is largely made up of letters exchanged between the family members. There is also some poetry composed by Uriah and other family members, general items of interest related to Seventh-day Adventists of the time, Uriah's Book of Finances, and a lot of auto-biographical and genealogical notes and other information on family history. There are some family materials post 1903 included in the first part, primarily a set of diaries of Uriah's wife and children. Daughter Annie's diaries are in the second part. There are some topical files, likely compiled by Mark Bovee, included here, largely related to Uriah.

The second part includes documents and collected information about the family of Mark Bovee, including his parents. There are many pieces of genealogical information including obituaries of family members. There are several boxes of diaries from Mark's mother and father as well as Mark himself. A large portion consists of Mark's notes and more formal writing about his family, Adventism in Battle Creek back in the day, and Adventists in general that usually have a Battle Creek connection. There are many photographs mounted permanently in albums. While there is some information about the people and places shown, the identities of most of the photographs are largely unknown. Some of the mounted photographs appear to have writing on the back, but the work of removing the photographs from the paper was not done.

Extent

approx. 11.75 linear feet (excluding artifacts)

Arrangement

Mark Bovee originally compiled and arranged this collection. However, over time this arrangement was lost. During the processing of the collection, the Center for Adventist Research (CAR) staff imposed the current arrangement.

There are two main parts: Uriah Smith and his immediate family prior to 1903, and the Smith/Bovee family from 1903 to 1990. Within these two parts there is correspondence, diaries, family records, biographical and genealogical information, and photographs. The collection has been described at the item level with the exception of photographs from the Mark L. Bovee family.

This original organization was done by Michael Campbell as part of his graduate studies at Andrews University. The detailed listings in this register are a result of that work. Some corrections and reorganization was done in 2018 by Vitalii Yakushin and Jim Ford to make the collection easier to use.

In 2026, in connection with her work on the Advent Source Collection and Froom's personal collection, Daniela Pusic made several discoveries. First, in collection folders and processing notes there were three different lists of artifacts pertaining to Uriah Smith that had both unique and overlapping items listed. Second, these artifacts and certain other documents relating to this collection were not listed in the prior (2018) form of the collection register and (aside from some photographs and Mark Bovee's diploma) none of them had been entered into the library catalogue. Additionally, on the shelves where most of the artifacts were stored, there were other artifacts that clearly belonged to the collection that were not listed in any of the artifact lists or processing notes. CAR also had two items on display (a table from Uriah Smith's house and J. N. Andrews's trunk) that were not listed in this register.

Daniela created a unified list of artifacts that is now found at the end of this register. She also added cross listings for some items that were likely part of this collection but had since been transferred into the general collection (e.g., 000652 Life Sketch of Uriah Smith by Mark L. Bovee).

Provenance

Mark L. Bovee donated this collection over a period of years beginning in 1964. The bulk of this collection was received by the Adventist Heritage Center in July 1987. Several other donors provided individual items: Leo R. Van Dolson donated a land contract between O. B. Frisbie and U. Wilton Smith, and Dorothy Smith Kewley donated a copy of Early Writings, given by Ellen White to Uriah Smith.
